

The flute of morning stilled in noon—noon the implacable bassoon—
now Twilight seeks the thrill of moon, washed with a wild and thin
despair of violin